

MAY TIP SHEET

While 1 in 5 people will experience a mental illness during their lifetime, everyone faces challenges in life that can impact their mental health. For those dealing with a chronic health condition and the people who care for them, it can be especially important to focus on mental health. Because of COVID-19 and social distancing – it is even more important to prevent the onset or worsening of mental health conditions, as well as chronic conditions like heart disease, diabetes, and obesity.

Focusing on both the physical and mental health concerns can be challenging – but critically important in achieving overall wellness. Living a healthy lifestyle may not be easy but can be achieved by gradually making small changes and building on those successes.

If you are not physically present with your loved ones, be sure to check-in with them through video chats or telephone calls and be mindful of early warning signs and symptoms that indicate someone might be showing signs of a mental health condition.

Having a combination of symptoms (not just one symptom) that last longer than a few weeks may indicate that you or a loved one should contact their doctor or a mental health provider.

HERE ARE SYMPTOMS TO LOOK OUT FOR IN YOURSELF OR A LOVED ONE:

-  Problems with concentration, memory, or ability to think clearly
-  Feeling overly worried
-  Changes in eating such as loss of appetite or overeating
-  Feeling sad, empty, hopeless, or worthless
-  Not being able to complete school or work tasks
-  Sensitivity to sounds, sight, smell, or touch
-  Loss of interest in activities that are normally enjoyable & withdrawal from others
-  Irritability and restlessness
